

Decay can happen very soon after teeth first appear.

- Bad teeth can cause pain, making it hard for koolangka to eat or sleep.
- Not eating or poor sleeping seriously affects koolangka's health.

Here's some good news

- Healthy habits from a very early age can help stop tooth problems.
- Looking after your koolangka's mouth should start very early.
- From six months, always wipe their gums with a cloth after a feed – even before their first teeth come through.
- When teeth start to appear, use a soft toothbrush with tap water only until your little one is 18 months old.
- Kids learn as they grow, so you are very important in teaching solid habits.

Strong teeth lead to lead to strong, healthy kids.
